Welcome!

April showers, bring. . . Well, it's that time of year when severe storms can wreak havoc on telephone systems, causing outages, damaged equipment, and loss of revenue. Liberty has a variety of solutions to help prevent this from happening to you. To learn more about how to protect your investment from lightening strikes and power surges, please see our "Item of the Month".

Gerry's Techno Bite

Several of Liberty's clients have experienced power outages due to thunderstorms. Since your telephone system is the main way to communicate, being down for more than a few minutes can really disrupt your business. You should have enough battery backup protection for your telephone system and computer network in the event that you experience a power outage. And if you do have a battery backup, it should be less than three years old.

In addition to power outages, you can be affected by power surges, which can occur through the telephones lines or an AC power outlet. You can protect your investment very simply by installing ITW LINX Lightening Protectors on all your analog telephone lines, so if you have 6 lines on your telephone system, a fax/modem line, and credit card line, you would need eight Protectors. Also, please make sure that your telephone system is grounded and that the AC power outlet is dedicated for proper surge protection. Whether you have POTs lines or T1 circuits, make sure your business insurance covers your telephone equipment.

It's also a good idea to keep a recent copy of your phone system database. Call us today for your free emergency plan evaluation.
